

ADOPTIVE AND FOSTER FAMILIES OF MAINE, INC.
& THE KINSHIP PROGRAM
2020 ANNUAL REPORT

On behalf of the staff and board of directors, AFFM is pleased to share this inaugural annual report with the community. 2020 was a year that challenged everyone, but also illustrated so clearly the resilience and perseverance of the families and communities in Maine. In an unprecedented year in AFFM history, 2020 underscored the pressing needs that children and families face and sharpened AFFM's focus on what matters most to families.

As an organization, 2020 brought with it a tremendous amount of growth and expansion as AFFM moved to a new office in Bangor and welcomed new staff throughout Maine to better expand its reach statewide. AFFM continued to build upon its services by establishing a more robust statewide Kinship Navigator Program and elevating the support and information received by 1,963 kinship families throughout the state.

As AFFM continued to expand, staff and volunteers simultaneously shifted their service delivery methods to meet the new realities of supporting families during COVID. AFFM quickly moved its operations to remote-based support without compromising the quality of services. As a result, there are remote support groups in all corners of the state ready to meet the emotional and social support needs of caregivers. AFFM provided training options that have engaged 846 caregivers and professionals over the course of the year.

In these ever-changing times, one thing remains constant and that is AFFM's grassroots commitment to serving families wherever they are in their journey. In times like these, building supportive communities is key to AFFM's work. Helping families build a community around themselves is vital to achieving positive outcomes and this is why AFFM values community partnerships. AFFM utilizes partnerships to meet the diverse and changing needs of families. AFFM has been fortunate to have established partnerships with public and private agencies, foundations, trusts, for-profit and nonprofit entities.

Partnering with the University of Southern Maine, The University of Maine, and The Department of Health and Human Services has helped AFFM develop new training and support options for families and professionals across the wonderful state of Maine. Through continued partnerships with the Brookdale Foundation and the John T. Gorman Foundation, AFFM continues to expand services to families and meet critical needs.

As the organization continues to grow and adapt, AFFM celebrates the strengths of families in times of need and invites you to join us in supporting Maine's adoptive, foster, and kinship families as we look toward a bright and hopeful future.

-Travis Bryant, Executive Director

“Resource families face many unique challenges every day.

Having to anticipate the unknown can make difficult situations seem unbearable. The biggest need in our family is often to simply hear someone say, “I understand” or “I have seen that before.” AFFM’s mentorship program has provided just that for us on multiple occasions over the past few years. Even when answers cannot be provided to specific questions, the kind voice of a partner resource parent can settle a troubled heart and provide the strength needed to keep pressing on.”

-William Kilpatrick, Resource Parent

“AFFM and the CARES meeting walk with you through the [foster/adoption] process. The training are thoughtfully chosen, the trainers themselves are always happy to spend time with the group, and they always seem to be perfectly timed. Talking to others who are more experienced on how to work with the state, how to work with bio-parents, or just realizing you are not crazy in your experience, is invaluable. CARES meetings are a staple that everyone in this process should attend. Not only have we loved attending meetings, but I am also not sure it would have been possible to get where we are today without AFFM’s support and the CARES meetings.

Keep doing what you are doing!”

- Charlie & Sheena Villard, Kinship Caregivers

The Kinship Program

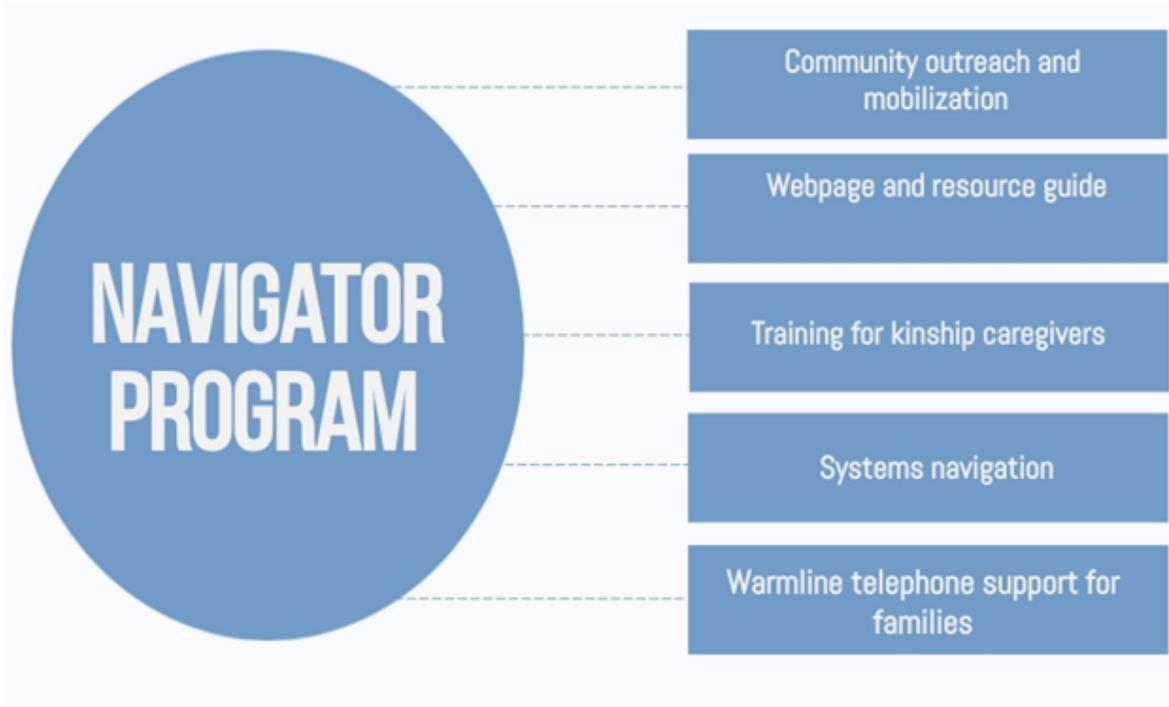

AFFM knows kinship relationships can often be stressful. As a neutral observer with years of experience, AFFM knows how to assist families with meeting their basic needs, systems navigation, family dynamics, child behaviors, and a variety of other situations faced by kinship families. This program provided direct support to 1,963 kinship families throughout Maine by identifying resources, supports, and services needed for kinship families and working collaboratively with other organizations to meet those needs. The focus of the navigator program includes community outreach and mobilization, webpage and resource guide, training for kinship caregivers, a respite program, and warmline telephone support for families.

“ We have been working with AFFM since 2018. This was when we had our first placement... AFFM has helped us through the process in so many ways. They have helped with clothing, diapers, Christmas gifts, a toddler bed for us in a time of need when we got another placement and needed to switch beds around to fit everyone. They have been such a huge part of our lives and such incredible support to us and a loving, lending hand in any way they could help. AFFM’s staff has always been accepting and so kind to our family, without them we would have been so lost as new foster parents being thrown into things so quickly sometimes. We have appreciated all their help over the years!”

- Kinship caregiver & former recipient of direct service support through the Gorman Foundation Grant on their positive experience with AFFM.

Kinship

Family

The focus of the navigator program includes community outreach and mobilization, webpage and resource guide, training for kinship caregivers, a respite program, referrals, and warmline telephone support for families. Through a partnership with the Gorman Foundation, AFFM has been able to provide emergency direct assistance to 59 families with immediate financial and resource needs. Emergency financial assistance from this fund helped cover the cost of utility bills, heating, food insecurities, beds, and cribs. Of the families that received financial assistance, the majority of families served are referred to a variety of supports that can continue to help families meet their needs including WIC nutrition support, Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP), SNAP food stamp program, General Assistance, housing vouchers, Social Security offices, DHHS offices, discount clothing, and furniture thrift stores, food banks, cooperative extension food programs & community gardens. Through the generosity of The Gorman Foundation, these funds have helped to meet immediate needs and fill resource gaps for families.

Through support from Maine's Office of Child and Family Services, AFFM has continued to serve as Maine's statewide Kinship Navigator Program. Through this partnership, AFFM has been able to develop resources intended to identify and support families providing informal kinship care. This program provided direct support to 1,963 kinship families throughout Maine by identifying resources, supports, and services needed for kinship families and working collaboratively with other organizations to meet those needs. The focus of the navigator program includes community outreach and mobilization, webpage and resource guide, training for kinship caregivers, a respite program, and warmline telephone support for families.

Partnerships

We encourage families to build resources and support around themselves. AFFM recognizes the importance of working on a systems-level to make sure those supports are available when families need them. AFFM is involved in numerous partnerships with statewide and national organizations and groups to meet this goal. Examples of the partnerships that help us meet family needs include:

Partnerships that Give Resource Families a Voice:

- Maine Child Welfare Advisory Panel
 - A collaborative task force comprised of private citizens and professionals across disciplines focused on handling child abuse and neglect. The panel is in place to make sure the state system is protecting and providing for children, youth, and families
- Justice for Children Task Force
 - A collaborative, cross-disciplinary task force aimed to improve safety, permanency, and well-being for children in the State of Maine child welfare system. The task force is composed of representatives from legislative, judicial, executive branches, advocates, and other citizens.
- Family First Prevention Services Act Planning Work Group
 - A working group created through legislation of the Federal Family First Prevention Services Act. The act is committed to keeping children safe, strengthening families, and if safety permits; reducing the need for foster care.

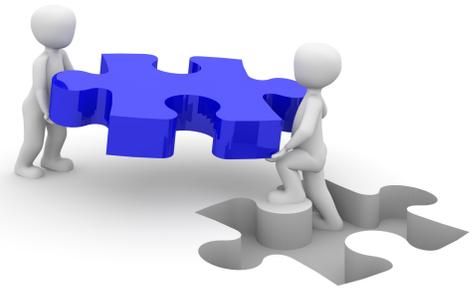

Community

Statewide Coordination/Building Service

Connections for Families:

- Maine Alliance for Family Organizations (MAFO)
 - A statewide association created to better serve families of children with disabilities and special health care needs. MAFO recognizes the important value of listening to family's voices, concerns, and overall input when providing services and support. Through its partnership with MAFO, AFFM is supporting a recent SAMHSA grant that is growing Home and Community-based Treatment (HCT) services in rural areas bringing services directly to families when and where they need them.
- Family-Focused Treatment Association (FFTA)
 - The FFTA is a nonprofit organization that was created to develop, promote, and support the treatment provided in foster care. FFTA provides services not only for foster care treatment but addresses the overall needs of children in foster care.
- YMCAs around the state (Bangor, Portland, Waterville)
 - A nonprofit organization that provides health and wellness opportunities for individuals in the community. YMCA is committed to strengthening communities through empowering individuals and inspiring action.

Raising Awareness on a National Level:

- Generations United Grandfamilies Advisory Group (GU)
 - Generations United's National Center on Grandfamilies functions to create supportive programs and laws for grandfamilies, and improve the accessibility to these services. GU's Grandfamilies advisory group conducts advocacy at a federal level and provides support at the state level to organizations and advocates.
- The Federal Advisory Committee on Grandparents Raising Grandchildren
 - An advisory council established to support grandparents raising grandchildren. The panel identifies, promotes, coordinates, and passes on information and resources to the public regarding best child practices, and other related child care guidance.
- North American Council on Adoptable Children (NACAC)
 - The NACAC educates, advocates, and supports adoptive families. NACAC advocates for policies and practices that improve children's chances of having a permanent family. NACAC aims to provide advocacy and support in order for adoptive families to thrive in their environment.

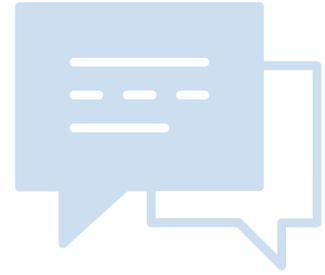

Partnership with the UMO:

- The University of Maine has been a longstanding partner in AFFM's work. Through this partnership, we have had masters-level social work students assist us with research to strengthen our outreach efforts; hosted internships through the UM School of Social Work to better serve our families; and document our impact and tell our story through an evaluation partnership with the UMaine Center on Aging. A recent story featured in Children's Voice magazine details our nearly 20 year history of collaboration

Outreach

With the physical distance guidelines of 2020, AFFM focused on creating social connections by utilizing technology and sticking with its roots. We updated our website, started an Instagram account, created private Facebook C.A.R.E.S. groups, and increased social media reach. Virtual spaces allowed for families to participate in much-needed self-care opportunities such as having coffee with friends, guided painting, and more.

Children from across the state tuned in to have story time with our family support specialists who also enjoyed having some of the youth share their favorite story.

Among the children's favorite was their story time with Mr. and Mrs. Claus. Knowing that not all families have the means for internet access nor prefer the virtual world, AFFM Staff and volunteers helped continue grassroots efforts by hand folding and labeling their bi-monthly Family Ties newsletters which was sent to more than 3,500 families, businesses, and organizations.
